

MORNING APPEAL.

Thursday, June 15 1886

A PERPLEXING SITUATION.

Nothing in the history of Carson has ever brought about a more perplexing and unpleasant state of affairs than the attempt on the part of the people of Carson to solve the Chinese question.

The majority of the people of this city think alike upon the principle of the thing, but differ upon the method of accomplishment.

Because there is an honest difference of opinion as to methods there should certainly be no trouble between men because these differences of opinion exist.

It is time that the town should cease to be shaken up with charges, counter charges, rows, hard feeling and boycott over this question.

Some eight hundred men signed an agreement to discharge their Chinese help. Most of us have kept this pledge. Many citizens who are just as earnest in the anti-Chinese cause as anybody, say:

"We agreed to discontinue the services of the Chinamen when we signed the Covenant, but we did not bind ourselves to compel others to do it."

Many people naturally shrink from placing themselves in an attitude of dictating to their neighbors, and it is unfair to ask anyone to assume that attitude.

The League has allowed itself to be carried away from the main issue. The original issue was a war upon the Chinese, but the League has begun a fight upon three other things:

- The V. & T. R. R. Company.
- The Republican party.
- The Tribune.

We do not believe that a vote of the eight hundred signers of the Covenant today would endorse the policy of aggressiveness against any of these institutions.

The R. R. Company are not now employing any Chinese, but on the contrary are giving employment to over 100 white men at the highest wages paid on any road in the world. A removal of the R. R. Company's depot and car shops from this city would be a much worse injury to this city than the closing of the Mint.

The Republican party of this city has never opposed the anti-Chinese movement as is evinced by the fact that a majority of the signers are Republican.

The Tribune took a stand against the movement in a manner which was offensive to the League. It did not discuss the matter fairly, and there were occasional personalities in its columns which incensed members of the League.

A majority of the Executive Committee decided to boycott the paper.

This was an ill-advised action, because it was an attempt to curtail the liberty of the Press.

If individual members felt aggrieved at unjust and unfair criticism they had a right to discontinue their support of the paper giving offense, but they had no right to insist that other people should do it. If the paper misrepresented facts, these misrepresentations could injure nobody. The boycott placed members of the League in an unpleasant position.

A business man said to the writer yesterday: "If I advertise in the Tribune I will lose at least twenty customers. If I remove my advertisement I shall lose as many more."

Either course he pursued would result in a loss to him of say $20 a month. This man was an earnest consistent member of the League and had made personal sacrifices for the cause. Now we submit it to any candid man if it is not an imposition upon any business man in Carson to place him in such an uncomfortable dilemma.

Men insist upon placing a citizen in such a position that no matter how he turns he loses $250 a month. Yet when these same men are called upon to contribute one dollar a month to aid in getting rid of the Chinese, they decline on the ground that it would be a hardship to make the contribution.

Men who refuse to make such a contribution do not want the Chinese to go. They are like Artemus Ward; willing to send all his wife's relations to the war, but in no hurry to go himself.

There are some prominent men in the League who have acted in good faith and made personal sacrifices in justification of principle, but their work has all been nullified by the action of those who have taken no time to consider the best method of accomplishing a desired end. The trouble and hard feeling which has been engendered is not congenial to a majority of the citizens of Carson. Much good has already been accomplished, but there is danger that it will all be lost to us by scattering the fire in so many different and uncalled-for directions.
